

Agriculture is about production and about people. The safety of the people on your farm is often overlooked. Accidents that occur on farm can have significant implications for you, your farm business and your family.

Workplace health and safety in the agriculture industry is regulated by states and territories. Meridian Agriculture advisors can help you assess whether the measures you have in place to protect your staff, family and yourself from accidents are adequate.

From chemicals to quadbikes, silos to farm dams, there are risks that may threaten your livelihood if you do not have adequate WHS plans in place.

Meridian Agriculture can help you develop WHS plans that are tailored to your farm.

WHAT CAN WE DO FOR YOU?

Meridian Agriculture works with people in the agricultural industries to:

- Assess on-farm risks.
- Develop processes to minimise those risks.
- Train and educate your staff, family, contractors and visitors about the on-farm risks.
- Audit your plans, systems and processes.
- Conduct annual reviews of plans, monitoring and evaluation of WHS processes on farm.

TOPICS THAT SHOULD BE DISCUSSED WITH PEOPLE ON YOUR FARM INCLUDE:

- Chemicals.
- Personal Protective Equipment.
- High risk and no go zones.
- Heavy farm machinery.
- Handling livestock.
- What to do in case of an emergency.
- The process for reporting accidents.
- Housekeeping.
- Entry and Exit notifications.
- Alcohol, drugs and use of weapons.
- Manual handling.
